

TeachingLive | Season 12 | Cogheart | Week 3 | TEACHING
NOTES | Tuesday 8th October 2024 | Sun Flowers / Moon
Flowers

Anything in blue should be read before the session – I will also put in red any grids or sentences or instructions that should ideally be in the children's books. A main focus of this session is to ensure that everyone is comfortable with the technology and the teaching sequence as well as loosening up and gaining confidence as writers. The children need:

- Notebooks/ writing journals and pencils
- access to a tablet
- be able to see main screen

Creative Game

As usual, the show begins with a game for children to play. Make sure that they have their notebooks and pencils ready and listen carefully. The games can be played as a class, in threes, in pairs or solo – usually played in pairs. Get everyone to make notes as Pie and David play the game. Then there will be a pause of a few minutes – a 'timer' will be onscreen giving a countdown. The initial games are played orally and do not involve them using their tablets.

Today's Game – ...

The Objective – to rapidly generate a list of imaginative and extraordinary ideas.

Warm up the imagination and get ideas buzzing with this initial game that will be played orally. The children will be given a set time limit to complete their ideas. David and Pie will model the game first. The idea is to create strange plants, flowers and trees that you might find in the 'Land of Neverbelieve'.

Use the grid below to help you create your plant.

Trees	Flowers
Roots, trunk, bark, branches, twigs, leaves, buds, flowers, fruit, crown.	Roots, stem, flower, fruit, leaf, pollen, petals.

List in turns as many ideas as you can think of for each part of the plant.

Instructions for making a tree/ flower

a. To make the roots, I would use –

b. the straggly hair of wild woman,

a. thick electricity cables

b. and rats' tails.

a. To make the trunk, I would use....

Padlet 1 – Children have a few minutes to complete one or more 'post it notes'.

a. Look at the list of flower names – either choose one or create your own flower or tree name. Notice how the names are often 'compound' words made up of two words put together, e.g. Snapdragon, Milkweed, Bluebell, Goldenrod, Buttercup. You could combine a flower name with another word, e.g. Sunlilly or Moonlily or StarLilly or Riverlily or Streetlily, etc.

b. Now write sentences to describe the different parts of the flower or tree, using similes – both 'like' and 'as':

The Sunlily's petals are like paper-thin flags, as soft as Parisian silk and blue as a summer sky.

The Rainrose's roots are like the dark threads from ancient tapestry, as tough as a leather handbag and dark as a mole's tunnel.

The Stormtree's Trunk is thick as an elephant's leg, as strong as a pylon and as grey as cold porridge.

The Foxfir's leaves are soft as a tiger's fur, as stripped as a zebra crossing and the colour of flames in darkness.

This activity is to tune the class back into writing creatively and thoughtfully, drawing on their imagination, avoiding clichés and using techniques that we looked at last year.

They should take ideas from the initial game or try new ones that pop into their minds.

- Remind them to extend their ideas.
- Remind them to use their senses – things you can see, hear, smell, taste and touch.
- Remind them to use accurate punctuation.
- If you have a very young class or reluctant writers who lack confidence, ideas could be co-constructed in pairs or as a class and posted by the teacher.
- Remind children and adults to use the refresh button at the top of the page so that they can see their post-it note appear – as each note is moderated, they will not all appear during the session but will appear later once moderated.

The Objective – to write extended, imaginative sentences that are correctly punctuated, drawing on associations.

Flower names

Daisy, lily, windflower, snapdragon, flamingo flower, Milkweed, goat's beard, corn flower, balloon flower, bell, blazing star, bluebell bleeding heart, blue starmorning glory, buttercup, hazel bush, candytuft, poppy, primrose, carnation, cherry pie plant, clematis, Clover, coneflower, coral bells, cranesbill, creeping ivy, crocus, crown imperial, cuckoo flower, daffodil, dahlia, desert rose, day rose, dog rose, Dutch iris, evening primrose, everlasting daisy, forgetmenot, foxglove, French marigold, goldenrod, heather, winter rose, hollyhock, honesty, honey suckle, ice plant, busy lizzie, starflower, morning glory, moonflower vine, iris, nightshade, Jacob's ladder, jasmine, kangaroo paw, red hot poker, beauty bush, lady's slipper, lavender, lilac, lily of the valley, love in the mist, luna weed, lupin, money plant, magnolia, Maltese cross, mayflower, touchmenot, Spanish flag, moonflower, monk's hood, paperwhites, baby blue eyes, catmint, cup flower, love in the mist, water lily, orchid, stargazer, ox eye daisy, oyster plant, painted daisy, passion flower, pansy, peace lily, peony, beard tongue, Persian buttercup, pincushion flower, pink lady's slipper, Ester flower, wind flower, powder puff, purple coneflower, Queen Anne's lace, Queen's cup, Queen of the meadow, rain lily, rock rose, rose of Sharon, soapwort, fan flower, snowdrop, snowflake, speedwell, bear berry, sundrop, sunflower, sweet pea, tea rose, tiger lily, flame freesia, hummingbird vine, tulip, snapdragon root, fever root, silver speedwell, periwinkle, johnny jump up, heartsease, violet, Virginia creeper, wallflower, wandflower, water lily, wild rose, wax plant, whirling butterflies, wild violet, winter berry, wishbone flower, wooly violet, yellow horn, straw flower, Indian basket grass, yellow-eyed grass, yellow- archangel, rain lily, angel cup, bittermint, honey cup.

Children's Audio – later on, discuss the most effective images, ideas or turn of phrase and discuss why it worked. During the performance, children should take notes of any words, phrases or ideas that they thought were effective.

The Objective – to listen attentively, enjoy and reflect on what makes good writing and performance.

Padlet 2 - This activity prepares the children for the blog post that they will write. The focus is on writing creative sentences to build a description of a tree or flower that they have created. Use imagery but also personification to bring the plant alive.

The pincushion flower stands like a soldier with its sharp spikes waiting to scratch.

The goldenpaw tree stoops when the snow smothers its branches, bowing its skeletal head like an old man at prayer.

The children can feed off the lists of ideas that have already been made in the game that they played and the padlet work. To get everyone started, Pie will read aloud the examples above. Encourage children to invent ideas and draw on a touch of alliteration, similes, metaphor and personification.

Encourage the children to listen to any advice that Pie gives during this session and to act on it. It might be worth jotting any useful writing tips down on the flipchart. For instance, name it, describe the detail so the reader can imagine it, reread to make the sentence flow, create fresh images not clichés, say it aloud, choose words with care, avoid repeating words, reread to police your sentences, pretend you are your teacher.... Writing tips could be made into writing posters or written in their journals.

Objective – the ability to write imaginative sentences, experimenting with alliteration, similes, personification and creating new phrases.

Gallery Challenge – Creating Kandinsky tree patterns or scary trees against circular backgrounds

Blogging Activity – Create a poem about an invented flower or type of tree that might be found on the Island of Neverbelieve.

Please find the two models below.

Children should build on the padlet ideas and write an extended poem having reread, discussed responded to and analysed Pie's poem below. It can help for the children to have a copy of Pie's poem in their books. Remind them to all come up with their own, original TITLE. Objective – write an extended list, playing with language and ideas, using alliteration, imagery, metaphor and word play.

Audio Challenge – If children want to record their own blog, ensure that they have read it aloud a number of times – and have a quiet space in which to record.

Please do not share these notes and models, put them online or use them for financial gain. Please respect my copyright. They are for your use with your class. Many thanks.

Moonflowers

Moonflowers blossom
like silver umbrellas, stretching out green vines that grasp onto nearby trees.
Their red roots,
Like wire, dig deep into soft soil that crumbles easily as fruit cake.
The green stem juts up,
Like a flexible straw,
As green as cat's eyes.
Leaves hang
Like little, soft fingernails.
Pastel pale, albino flowers, edged with red, yawn revealing the secret stash of pollen gold.

Windtrees

Windtrees lean with the wind,
Like strange dancers.
Their roots are knuckles
Gripping onto the earth.
The trunk is slender
As a ballerina's waist,
Covered in silver bark.
Branches weep,
Twigs are finger-thin.
Leaves rustle messages.
Owl-roost, rook-haven;
Windtrees.

Notes for 'Read and Respond' to the main poem

Loosening the imagination

This writing session is really about continuing to build a sense of confidence whilst providing a challenging metaphorical frame to explore. To this end, we are writing about different plants that might be met in 'The Land of Neverbelieve'.

Read and Respond

Before or following the programme, at a suitable time, read through the poem fluently and expressively. Begin with a discussion of preferences - which sections do they like or dislike and why. The aim of this initial discussion is to get them digging deeper into the poem, thinking about its effect on them as readers and the images and ideas it creates.

To generate thinking, use a variety of prompts such as:

- Which ideas are the most surprising and why?
- Which ideas interest you the most and why?
- Which one do you wish you had written and why?
- Any suggestions for improvements?
- Find and explain the hardest idea.

I'd go through it line by line, taking their thoughts about each idea. Create a simple display by the class choosing their favourite ideas and illustrating – any good ones could be popped onto the TeachingLive gallery.

Model how to write a short 'critical response' paragraph about a line/ verse of their choosing; use simple sentence starts, e.g.

I like the line about

The poet states,

This suggests that because....

Furthermore,

The phrase this reminds me of.....

I was surprised by

Where the poet says.... It made me think of.....

Perform

Split the class into mini-groups so that each group has a section of the poem to perform. Work towards a whole class performance. If they work in threes or fours, then they only might have a few lines which would speed this up!

Analyse the poem

Once everyone has had time to discuss and think about the meaning of the poem, begin to analyse the various different writing techniques and challenges that the children could use in their writing. This could involve a quick discussion and then immediately modeling with the class joining in before they write several examples using a similar technique or approach.

It's easy enough to spot obvious techniques such as using alliteration (repeating similar sounds at the start of words) or using a simile with 'like' or 'as' to make a comparison or personification. This could lead to producing with the class a writing toolkit of possibilities, e.g.

To write a playful poem, you could –

- use alliteration to create memorable sounds;
- use similes with like or as to build pictures;
- use personification to make objects sound as if they are alive;
- create hyphenated phrases and kennings;
- choose words with care;
- try to surprise the reader with new ideas.

You could add in other aspects that have been taught such as metaphor, personification, juxtaposition, words with double meanings, etc. The two model poems have no structure other than:

- Start with the name of the plant.
- Then write descriptive sentences and phrases for different parts of the plant.
- Try to 'round the poem off'.

Brainstorm

It is worth spend ten minutes or so doing a massive class brainstorm of based on images of a selection of flowers and trees. Children should be jotting down ideas that they might use at the same time. This means that no one can say, 'I don't know what to write about'.

Shared writing

As a matter of principle, I always used to 'do one together first', before they wrote. Again, this would be fairly rapid and I'd be pushing and challenging their suggestions as 'the first thought isn't always the best'. I'd be getting them to generate ideas and then choose with care, avoiding clichés and creating surprises.

When KS2 children write, I'd suggest total silence and give them a time limit of say 10 minutes. This creates a sense of urgency as you want the children's total concentration. Extend the time, if they are working hard. The writing might stretch over several sessions.

Polishing

Use the IWB to show lines from different children, especially where there are teaching points to make. Children can then tweak and polish independently or in pairs. Model editing on the board – watch out for 'repetition' that doesn't work and tightening verbs, e.g. leaning – leans. As well as clichés.

Blog it and Audio

Finally the children copy up their completed poem and then it can be blogged. If they have time, get them to perform for the audio padlet.

Examples from previous sessions to read to the class. In the first one I've shown the underlying structure in blue.

Flameblossom Trees

Flameblossom trees bend and dance in the breeze,
Like flexible gymnasts.
Their branches lean and creak with grace,
Grabbing at the shining sun.
The trunks are as rough as tractor tires,
Covered in brown, sticky mud.
With bark as shiny as solid gold,
Cracking at every problem it overcomes.
The roots are like stretchy elastic,
Pulling the tree down with all its might.
Twigs as skinny as a clock's hand,
Snapping at every emotion.
Leaves as smooth as plush velvet,
That fall down at every autumn that arrives.

Jewel Tree

Jewel trees clutter in the breeze,
The gems substitute leaves,
Its trunk crumbly,
Like a freshly baked chocolate cake,
With at least twenty one layers,
Smothered in jewels of all kinds,
Sky blue sapphires,
And as red as bubbling lava rubies,
With pearls as smooth as an apple's skin,
A jewel tree is decorated with,
Bark as rustic as tired metal,
With roots tangled like computer wires,
And twigs as bright as Christmas fairy lights,

Jewel Trees whisper against the wind,
Their voices as hoarse as an,
Old man, tiring himself in a short jog,
They're crown as gathered and full,
As an oversized crowd of people at a concert,
And it's shining and glistening as of the gems,
Ocean-clear diamonds,
And grass-green emeralds,
With the most majestic opals,
And a lavender amethyst,
Topping it off with a,
Bright high-lighter shade topaz,
All of these things make a:
Jewel Tree.

Trees and flowers

Orchid-stargazer twinkles with golden clusters of pollen scattered across the delicate petals.
Groups of complex patterns cover the underside of this wonderful flower.

Slither-bud trees grow miniature buds that envelope the tree in bright shades of pink and magenta.

In the summer, when the buds bloom, they are highly dangerous. Venomous snake eggs will leap from the trees, whispering your secrets.

Luna-wind flower spreads dust. Some poisonous and some pleasant.
Its tubular pollen container reaches up to the sun and ombre petals are shrivelled like cabbage.

Isabella – Stone-with-Woodford Primary School

Honeypetal

Bowing to the sun,
the honeypetal cries sticky tears
by day,
and by night
is as solemn as a secret.
Its amber, bowl-petals catch the flower's prey with the thick slab of glue pasted on each.
The stem is thick and short,
like a thumb.
Hidden underneath the petals,
the pollen is sweet
as a guilty child's smile,
and a favourite of the bees.

Skeletree

A Skeletree's roots are vexed pythons
crawling through the unknown undergrowth.
Its trunk is a hollow trap,
a horror to all wildlife.
Emerging ominously
from black bead buds,
the lifeless skeletons
of leaves are like tangled, ashen spiderwebs.

Maggie – Stone-with-Woodford Primary School

Featherflowers

Featherflowers whisper secrets like a game of chinses whispers.
The featherflower flies if in danger and shields when withering away like a lost memory.

Its roots as weak as autumn leaf regrowing after flight.
Guarding its treasure like an evacuee ready to go.

Chimney trees

its strong pillared trunk puffs smoke like a volcano erupting.
Interestingly the roots are like octopuses tentacles dug deep into the soft soil.

His leaves amber like a traffic light warning people.

Ollie – Stone-with-Woodford Primary School

Pillow flowers

Pillow flower drifts elegantly, floating higher and higher into abyss of the suffocating blue, till it was only a lost memory,
sinking further away.

It's stone pillar of a stem, was rooted to the ground as its paper thin, albino petals, slowly met the floor where they shrivelled up like dead worms. Its pollen was like stolen sugar from the back of the cupboard or sand stuck to your feet, annoying your mum when it is spread through the house. Its slender thin stem like a ballerina's waist.

Weeping Oak

The Weeping oak's branches stretch out like a bullying boy's arm, its twigs sprouting new buds.
She whispers her secrets to the wind, forming a blanket that wraps around her. Its crooked fingered roots engrave itself in the home made biscuit like soil, crumbling to make an over-hanging hole, revealing her rough roots as if it were rough, bruised skin.
As if it were waiting for someone, the Weeping oak longingly stood there, looking droopy and sad.

Henry – Stone-with-Woodford Primary School

Magical Botanical

A sloth sunflower slowly swayed in the breeze. Its petals are like a sloth's ears flopping frantically like my homework in the wind.
Grey and yellow tones display brightly as the sun glistened in the Winter snow.

A flamingo flower drank the rain that was falling rapidly from the sky. It's precious, pink, perfect, petals pranced proudly in the winter wind. The pink and black colour struck tones blind each passer-by. The flamingo flower is as tall as the Burj Khalifa.

A Professor Lupin flower howls proudly under a full moon before light appears. He holds a 10 ¼ Cypress unicorn hair wand to protect himself with his dark arts magic with his imperio charm (killing charm) on each passer-by. Dark in appearance, black and brown hue pigments the petals wildly shake.
